is too many.

2 babies with congenital syphilis were stillborn in SK in 2020.

Syphilis cases in Saskatchewan have more than doubled in the last year.

Syphilis is most common between the ages of 20 – 40. These are the same as the childbearing years for women.

Syphilis is harmful to unborn babies and may have life-long impacts after birth.

If you suspect syphilis, don't wait – get tested today!

Contact your local health center or community health nurse for testing.
